Guide to reading this. Here are the “assault weapon” definitions from the new statute with the “deletions and additions” eliminated to make them easier to read. The structure of this statute is: Major headings are numbered in Arabic numerals, (1) through (9). Sub-headings are lettered, such as (A) and (B). Sub-sub-headings are designated by lower case Roman numerals, such as (i) and (ii). “Sub-sub-sub-headings” are in upper case Roman numerals. This is important because you need to know what provisions are being modified.

DISCLAIMER: I am solely a trust and estate lawyer. I do estate planning and settlement for gun owners. I know virtually nothing about criminal law and am not intimately familiar with all of the Connecticut gun laws. For people looking for that type of information, I would suggest that you arrange for a professional consultation with Atty. Ralph Sherman. His telephone number is 860-229-0213

FAQ and REQUEST: I’ve received a lot of calls from people who want to do a gun trust (NFA Trust) to “protect” some of their firearms. The primary purpose of these trusts is to acquire NFA items. I’m sorry, but I’m not able to offer any opinion as to whether a trust will offer any “protection.” If you want to buy or construct an NFA item, I’d be happy to discuss a trust with you.

Here is the text of the statute. I’ve changed the indentations to make it more readable.
